Club History

With the second most wins in MLS history and a pair of MLS Cup championships to their name, the LA Galaxy enter their fourteenth MLS season looking to regain their spot at the top of MLS and continue to push the league forward in the national and international arenas.

Initially formed by LA Soccer Partners, the team played the inaugural 1996 season at Pasadena's Rose Bowl, which was filled to capacity for the opening game a 2-1 win over the MetroStars behind goals from Cobi Jones and Arash Noamouz.

On June 16 of that inaugural season, more than 92,000 fans packed the Rose Bowl to see the Galaxy defeat the Tampa Bay Mutiny and the U.S. National Team play to a 2-2 draw with Mexico. That day's crowd of 92,216 was a league record that stood for more than ten years before being broken in 2006. The club has continued in that vein, and has held the league's average attendance record nine times in the first 13 years of MLS, including every season since moving into The Home Depot Center in 2003.

Led from the front by El Salvadoran playmaker Mauricio Cienfuegos, U.S. veteran Cobi Jones and Eduardo 'El Tanque' Hurtado, and a tight defensive unit organized by team captain Dan Calichman and Robin Fraser, with Mexican goalkeeper Jorge Campos, the team racked up a 19-13 record on their way to a Western Conference title and a berth in the MLS Cup against D.C. United in 1996.

In a game played in a torrential downpour in Foxboro, Mass., the Galaxy were up 2-0 on goals by Hurtado and Chris Armas before falling 3-2 on a golden goal header by Eddie Pope.

After a 1-7 start to the 1997 season, original head coach Lothar Osiander was replaced by assistant coach Octavio Zambrano, who led the team to a second place finish in the West with a 16-16 record before falling in the playoffs to the Dallas Burn.

In his first full season as head coach in 1998, Zambrano gave the green light to his players to strive for goals. They responded by netting 85 of them in the regular season, still the all-time single season record in MLS, with Cobi Jones (19 goals), Welton (17 goals) and Mauricio Cienfuegos (13 goals) all tallying career-highs for goals that season.

Offensive firepower had not come at the expense of defense. Calichman was lost early in the season to a broken leg, but the addition of Paul Caligiuri and the rise of goalkeeper Kevin Hartman allowed the team to hold their opponents to 44 goals, while posting seven shutouts as the team rolled to a 24-8 record and an MLS record 68 points.

However, regular season success did not carry over into postseason play. After exacting playoff revenge on Dallas with a two-game sweep that saw LA outscore them 9-3, the Galaxy fell to the expansion Chicago Fire in a shootout finish at Soldier Field.

In October 1998, AEG purchased the Galaxy with a new vision to become "The club by which all others are measured". Upon taking over the club, AEG sought to shape the Galaxy into a brand on the local, national and international level.

By the end of AEG's first full season of ownership, the Galaxy were once again Western Conference champions, this time under new head coach Sigi Schmid, who replaced Zambrano after a 2-3 start to the season. The Los Angeles defense was once again the best in the league, allowing only 29 goals in 32 games.

Schmid led the team to a 20-12 record and the MLS Cup, but the curse of Foxboro Stadium continued to haunt the team. Once again playing D.C. United, stalwart defender Fraser was lost to a broken collarbone just minutes into the match, and United was able to claim its third MLS title after a 2-0 win.

In their first full season under Schmid, the Galaxy finished the 2000 season second in the West with a 14-10-8 record, with the eight draws coming courtesy of the discontinuation of the shootout to settle regular season tied games.

While able to sweep the Tampa Bay Mutiny out of the playoffs, Los Angeles fell just shy of a return trip to MLS Cup as they were eliminated by the eventual champion Kansas City Wizards. After a win and a draw in the first two games of the series against the Wizards, the Galaxy fell in Game

Three 1-0 before losing again in the sudden death series tiebreaker, that sent K.C. to the MLS Cup.

The Galaxy finally were able to take home some silverware in 2001, bringing home the first two championships in club history. Participating in the 2000 CONCACAF Champions Cup, they took the regional title with a 3-2 win over Olimpia of Honduras, despite the tournament's 2001 preseason timeslot.

In league play, a 14-7-5 record once again gave the team second place in the Western Conference and a chance to play for the previously unheard of 'Treble' of MLS Cup, U.S. Open Cup and CONCACAF Champions Cup titles. After disposing of the MetroStars and Chicago, Sigi Schmid's squad advanced to the MLS Cup, where they fell for a third time, this time to California rivals San Jose on an extra time goal from Dwayne DeRosario. A scoreless second half after Luis Hernandez and Landon Donovan had traded first half strikes sent the match to extra time, setting up DeRosario for the deciding tally.

Despite still suffering from the sting of defeat in the MLS Cup, the Galaxy were able to claim a second honor one week later. Defender Danny Califf nodded home a golden goal winner in extra time to give the Galaxy a 2-1 victory over the New England Revolution in the Lamar Hunt U.S. Open Cup Final.

A month before the 2002 season, the Galaxy signed Guatemalan striker Carlos Ruiz, and "El Pescadito" - The Little Fish - showed MLS exactly how slippery he was in the season's first game against D.C. United. Ruiz scored both goals in a 2-1 win, with the first coming courtesy of a classic Ruiz goal, where he turned Eddie Pope before firing a shot past the United keeper. That would be the first of an eventual team record tally of 24 goals on the year for Ruiz who would go on to be named MLS MVP.

The team ended the 2002 season 16-9-3 and in first place in the West, and advanced through the playoffs by demolishing Kansas City and Colorado. The MLS Cup was once again held in Foxboro, but this time it was at the new Gillette Stadium and the opposition was the hometown Revolution.

Playing before a packed house of mostly New England fans, the Galaxy and Revolution were scoreless at the end of 90 minutes. In extra time, it was Ruiz who gave the team their first MLS Cup championship, sliding onto a long cross from Tyrone Marshall and pushing the ball past goalkeeper Adin Brown for the game-winning golden goal, sending Galaxy fans into hysterics.

In 2003, the Galaxy moved to their new base at The Home Depot Center, but were forced to play their first eight games on the road while waiting for construction to be completed for the June home opener. While a 0-4-4 record was respectable, a July trip to South Korea to play against some of the best club sides in the world at the FIFA Peace Cup further crowded the schedule and the team struggled to achieve their best form. LA ended the season with a 9-12-9 record that pitted them against a very strong San Jose team in the playoffs.

The Galaxy romped to a 2-0 win at The Home Depot Center in the first leg of the new playoff system and traveled to Spartan Stadium with high expectations. Those expectations were even higher after scoring twice inside the opening 15 minutes to lead with a 4-0 aggregate score, but the Earthquakes would go on to score five straight goals to take the series and eventually went on to win MLS Cup in Carson.

Before the 2003 season, longtime Galaxy legend Mauricio Cienfuegos announced that he would retire at the end of the season. While the loss of the Salvadoran playmaker was difficult, Schmid was able to replace him with a pair of players in Austrian veteran Andreas Herzog and former U.S. international Jovan Kirovski. However, the Galaxy coach would not be there at the end of the season as he was replaced late in the season by former U.S. National Team head coach Steve Sampson.

Given the changes, the team did well to finish second in the Western Conference with an 11-9-10 record, and beat Colorado in the Western Conference Semifinals before falling to Kansas City in the Conference Championship.

In 2005, with the addition of U.S. National Team star forward Landon Donovan, the Galaxy took the coveted 'Double' of the Lamar Hunt U.S. Open Cup and MLS Cup, making it their most successful season to date. With World Cup and Gold Cup duties depleting the roster throughout the season, young players like striker Herculez Gomez - who took the place of Carlos Ruiz who had been traded to Dallas - and defender Ugo Ihemelu were able to step up and show their talents.

In late September, the club claimed their second U.S. Open Cup title with a 1-0 win over FC Dallas at The Home Depot Center courtesy of a Gomez goal. They made the MLS playoffs via the final Western Conference slot and advanced to the MLS Cup after defeating San Jose 4-2 on aggregate in the Western Conference Semifinals and knocking off

Colorado 2-0 behind two Landon Donovan goals to book a spot in the MLS Cup. Once again the New England Revolution were the opponent; with the newly-opened Pizza Hut Park in Frisco, Texas serving as the venue.

Once again, the two sides were scoreless after 90 minutes, only for the Galaxy to earn a victory courtesy of an extra time goal from a Guatemalan player. This time, it was a glorious volley from Guillermo 'El Pando' Ramirez – just his second goal of the season and the first from the run of play that gave the Galaxy a 1-0 victory and sent the trophy back to Los Angeles.

However, the joy of 2005 was soon replaced by a tumultuous 2006 that saw the tragic death of the club's President and General Manager Doug Hamilton on a flight back from Costa Rica where the Galaxy had just lost in the CONCACAF Champions Cup. The loss of the team's chief architect was felt on the field as well as the Galaxy struggled to defend their MLS Cup championship. In June, Frank Yallop was hired to replace Steve Sampson and he began to pull the club out of its early season struggles. However, a late season run, which included the club's capture of the Honda SuperClasico against Chivas USA, was not enough and LA missed the playoffs for the first time ever.

The Galaxy fared slightly better in the Open Cup, returning to the Final for the fourth time in six years, only to fail to defend its 2005 title, falling 3-1 to the Chicago Fire at Toyota Park.

The 2007 campaign started with a bang as the club announced in January that it had signed English midfielder David Beckham. One of the world's greatest players, Beckham would come to LA in July after finishing up his contract at Real Madrid, helping them win the La Liga championship.

July also saw the Galaxy debut a new look as well as their newest player with the unveiling of the Galaxy's new brand, colors and logo. A classic look of white jerseys with navy blue piping, white shorts and white socks was used for the club's primary kit while navy blue and gold was featured on the secondary uniform. The Galaxy's new logo was a traditional navy blue crest which prominently features a quasar, which is the heart of a Galaxy.

Despite making his debut in front of a sold out crowd and millions of viewers on ESPN, Beckham's first season in LA was blighted by injuries to both himself and the rest of the Galaxy squad. Once again, Frank Yallop's team put together a late season run, only to fall just short, losing their final game of the season in Chicago to miss out on a playoff berth by the narrowest of margins.

The 2007 season also saw the Galaxy's participation in the inaugural SuperLiga, which pitted the best teams in the United States against the best club teams in Mexico. The Galaxy finished at the top of their group, despite falling to Chivas de Guadalajara at the L.A. Coliseum, by defeating FC Dallas and Pachuca to set up a semifinal meeting with D.C. United. Goals in that game from David Beckham, his first for the club, and Landon Donovan sent LA through to the Final where they would once again meet Pachuca. The visitors from Mexico took an early lead on that day, only for Chris Klein to equalize with an acrobatic bicycle kick deep into stoppage time, sending the game to extra time. The Galaxy had the better of the chances in the extra 30 minutes, but were unable to break the deadlock, and Pachuca would emerge victorious, winning 4-3 on penalties.

But success in SuperLiga was not enough and Yallop was released from his contract in November. He was replaced by former Dutch international Ruud Gullit, one of the game's all-time greats.

However, despite success early in 2008, the Galaxy struggled in the middle of the season, going a club record 12 games without a win and slipped to the bottom of the standings. Gullit left the club in August and was replaced by two-time MLS Cup champion coach Bruce Arena, who is the all-time leader in wins amongst coaches with the U.S. National Team. Despite having a roster that included Landon Donovan, who led MLS with 20 goals in 25 games, Edson Buddle, whose 15 goals were a career-high and the third most in the league, as well as Beckham, U.S. internationals Chris Klein and Eddie Lewis and the 2008 MLS Rookie of the Year Sean Franklin, the Galaxy were unable to qualify for the MLS Playoffs for the third straight season.

With the 2009 season upon us and hope for a return to glory renewed, Bruce Arena and Co. have their sights fully fixed on returning the Galaxy to their rightful spot atop MLS.

Coaches

BRUCE ARENA General Manager/ Head Coach

One of the most successful head coaches in U.S. National Team history and a two-time MLS Cup Champion Head Coach with D.C. United, Bruce Arena was named General Manager and Head Coach of the Los Angeles Galaxy on August 18, 2008. Arena, who is the seventh coach in club history, oversees all of the club's soccer operations, including training, tactics, scouting and player acquisitions. He compiled a 2-5-3 record over the final two and a half months of the 2008 season after joining the Galaxy.

The all-time leader in wins amongst coaches in U.S. National Team history, Arena led the U.S. to the FIFA World Cup twice, including an historic quarterfinal berth in 2002 in Japan/Korea. Arena took over as head coach in November 1998 and was in charge for nearly eight years, collecting a 71-30-29 all-time record, while leading the U.S. to the CONCACAF Gold Cup title in 2002 and 2005, the 2000 Nike U.S. Cup championship, as well as a third place finish in the 1999 Confederations Cup in Mexico.

A two-time MLS Cup winning coach, Arena is one of just four coaches ever to win the MLS Cup on more than one occasion. Additionally, only he and current Seattle Sounders FC Head Coach Sigi Schmid have won multiple MLS Cup championships and the Lamar Hunt U.S. Open Cup.

Arena was the first coach in D.C. United history, joining the club for its inaugural season in 1996. He would spend three seasons with United, reaching the MLS Cup three times, winning it twice, in addition to reaching the U.S. Open Cup Final twice, winning one. He also helped United become the first MLS team ever to win the CONCACAF Champions Cup and the Interamerican Cup, winning each in 1998.

Following the 2006 FIFA World Cup in Germany, Arena parted company with National Team and returned to MLS when he was named the Sporting Director and Head Coach of the New York Red Bulls in August 2006. He spent a year and a half with the Red Bulls, compiling a 16-16-10 record while helping New York reach the postseason both years. He helped to develop young stars like Jozy Altidore and Dane Richards while also signing players like Juan Pablo Angel, who was a finalist for the MLS MVP award and the Newcomer of the Year Award in 2007.

Born and raised in New York, Arena raised to prominence as the head coach at the University of Virginia men's soccer team. He held that position for 18 years, helping the Cavaliers to five ACC Tournament Championships and five National Championships, including four in a row from 1991-1994.

DAVE SARACHAN Associate Head Coach

The Galaxy's Associate Head Coach, Dave Sarachan joined the club in August 2008 along with Bruce Arena. This is the fourth time in his coaching career that Sarachan has worked with Arena. He had previously served as his assistant at the University of Virginia (1984-1988), D.C. United (1998-1999) and with the U.S. National Team (2000-2002).

Following the 2002 MLS season, Sarachan was named the head coach of the Chicago Fire, a position that he held for four and a half years, helping lead the Fire to the 2003 MLS Cup Final, while also winning the MLS Coach of the Year award that season. Sarachan also helped lead the Fire to a pair of U.S. Open Cup Championships in 2003 and 2006.

In his time with the Fire, Sarachan's teams had a record of 55-50-31 in regular season games and reached the postseason three times. Under his direction, the Fire never failed to at least reach the semifinals of the Lamar Hunt U.S. Open Cup, reaching the Final three times and winning the tournament twice.

TREVOR JAMES Assistant Coach/ Director of Player Development

A native of Norwich, England, Trevor James is an assistant coach as well as the Galaxy's Director of Player Development. In addition to his work with the first team at training and on game days, James also oversees all aspects of the club's Youth Development Program, which include teams of Under-16, Under-18 and Under-20.

In less than two years under James' tutelage, the program has already produced its first senior team player, 18-year old forward Tristan Bowen, who was signed in November.

The club's longest tenured coach, James is beginning his fourth season with the Galaxy, originally joining the club's coaching staff in June 2006. Following the departure of Frank Yallop in November 2007, James was named the club's interim head coach, leading the Galaxy in a pair of friendlies in Vancouver and Minnesota. He began his coaching career in 1985 at Ipswich Town as the club's youth academy coach. He then moved to Colchester United as the club's Reserve Team Manager. He remained at Colchester until hired at Cambridge United of England's League One as their First Team Coach and Chief Scout for the 2000-01 season.

James' distinguished playing career included stops with Viking Stavanger of the Tippeligaen (Norwegian First Division), Colchester United and the Los Angeles Lazers of the Major Indoor Soccer League (MISL), before he retired in 1985.

Coaches

COBI JONES Assistant Coach

A true Galaxy legend, Cobi Jones was a star midfielder for the Galaxy for each of their first 12 years of play before joining the club's coaching ranks shortly after retiring in November 2007. The club's all-time leader in nearly every statistical category, Jones begins his second season as an assistant coach with the club.

Recognized internationally for his on-field skills as well as for his custom dreadlocks, Jones scored 70 goals and added 91 assists in 306 career regular season games with the Galaxy, leading the club to two MLS Cup titles (2002 and 2005). His first season as a coach was highlighted by a 2-2 draw against local derby-rival Chivas USA in August, when he was the club's interim head coach following the departure of Ruud Gullit a few days prior.

Jones, who was a permanent fixture on the U.S. National Team from 1992-2004, playing in three consecutive World Cups (1994, 1998, 2002) and collecting 164 career caps, which are the most in U.S. Men's National Team history. Prior to signing with the Galaxy in March 1996, Jones played with Coventry City of the English Premier League and Brazilian side Vasco de Gama.

IAN FEUER Goalkeeper Coach

Ian Feuer enters his third season as the Galaxy's Goalkeepers Coach after having been hired by the club on September 1, 2007. Feuer, who played professionally in both Europe and the United States, has worked with more than 10 different goalkeepers during his time with the club, including recent signings Donovan Ricketts and Josh Saunders.

The Las Vegas native began his professional career in 1993 with Belgian side Club Brugge before briefly returning to the United States later that year to play for the L.A. Salsa of the APSL. After a short stint with the Salsa, the 36-year old returned to Europe in April 1994 when he signed with West Ham United of the English Premier League. After a brief loan spell at Luton Town, he was sold outright to the club in December 1995. He remained at the club, winning the Fans' Player of the Year Award in the 1995-96 season, until March 1998 when he again returned to the U.S., signing with the New England Revolution.

Feuer, who earned his first cap with the U.S. National Team against Morocco on March 18, 1992, appeared in and started 26 games for New England in 1998 before being traded to Colorado in February 1999. Feuer started 19 games for the Rapids that season, as well as each of the club's two postseason matches, keeping eight clean sheets while compiling a 1.22 goals against average. He returned to West Ham after the 1999 MLS season and spent the next three years in England with West Ham.

DAVID BECKHAM 23

Currently on loan with AC Milan of Serie A, David Beckham will rejoin the Galaxy in July to begin his third season with the club. The Galaxy's Designated Player, Beckham signed with the club in January 2007 before making his Galaxy debut against Chelsea in July of that year. Last year, in his first full season with the Galaxy, Beckham was named to the MLS All-Star Team after tallying a team-high 10 assists to go along with five goals. A three-time World Cup veteran with the English National Team, Beckham has been capped 108 times by his country, tying him with Bobby Moore for the most caps by a field player in England history.

TRISTAN BOWEN 17

The first player signed by the Galaxy from the club's Youth Academy, Tristan Bowen is in his first season with the club after signing in November 2008. A native of Los Angeles, he signed with the Youth Academy in April 2007 and played for the U-17 and U-20 teams before making his professional debut in a series of Reserve Division games at the end of the 2008 campaign. A veteran of the U.S. Under-18 and Under-20 National Teams, the 18-year old made his first team debut in New Zealand in a friendly against the Oceania All-Stars in December.

The Galaxy's second leading scorer with a career-best 15 goals in 2008, Edson Buddle is back for his third season with the Galaxy. A native of New York, Buddle was hampered by injury for much of the early part of the 2008 season before breaking out in May. Beginning with a hat trick on May 18 against FC Dallas, Buddle scored 10 goals in a seven-game stretch, helping LA to a 4-2-1 record and earning him a spot on the MLS All-Star Team for the first time. A quad injury late in preseason kept him on the sidelines for much of the lead-up to the season opener.

A.J. DELAGARZA 20

A two-time National Champion at the University of Maryland, A.J. DeLaGarza is in his first season with the Galaxy after being selected by the club in the second round of the 2008 MLS SuperDraft. While at Maryland, DeLaGarza was used in central defense alongside his Galaxy teammate Omar González, but will likely see action at both right and left back after impressing during the preseason. Despite his slight size, the 21-year-old started 81 of 88 games in which he appeared in at Maryland and started in both the 2005 and 2008 College Cup Finals, helping the Terrapins win a pair of National Championships.

LANDON DONOVAN 10

The club's reigning MVP and the winner of the 2008 Budweiser Golden Boot award, Landon Donovan is back for his fifth season with the Galaxy. The second leading scorer in club history, including a career-best 20 in 25 games last year, Donovan spent the offseason on loan with Bayern Munich, making seven appearances for the club in the Bundesliga and DFB Cup while scoring four times in five friendlies during the club's winter break. The all-time leader in goals with the U.S. National Team, the 27-year-old has won the MLS Cup three times, including once with the Galaxy in 2005.

TODD DUNIVANT 2

Back with the Galaxy nearly three years after he was traded to New York, Todd Dunivant will wear a Galaxy uniform for the first time since the 2006 season. A left back who played in every game for the club during the 2005 MLS Cup/U.S. Open Cup Double winning season, Dunivant was acquired from Toronto FC in February. A two-time MLS Cup winner, he missed much of the 2008 season and the 2009 preseason while recovering from a broken ankle. Once he is back on the field, Dunivant will likely become the Galaxy's first choice left back.

SEAN FRANKLIN 28

The 2008 MLS Rookie of the Year and the Galaxy's Defender of the Year last season, Sean Franklin is back for his second season with the club. A native of Palmdale, Franklin excelled in his first season as a pro, becoming the first Galaxy player ever to be named the League's Rookie of the Year. He appeared in 27 games, making 26 starts, primarily as a center back, though he is expected to move to his natural position of right back in 2009. The No. 4 pick in the 2008 MLS SuperDraft, Franklin was called in to the U.S. National Team for the first time in November.

OMAR GONZÁLEZ 4

The Galaxy's first pick at the 2008 MLS SuperDraft, Omar González will look to follow in the footsteps of Sean Franklin by becoming the Galaxy's second straight Rookie of the Year. A National Champion as a junior at the University of Maryland, González is a two-time All-American and was voted the College Cup's Best Defensive Player in 2008. A member of the U.S. Under-17 and Under-20 National Teams, the 6-foot-5 Dallas native is also a major attacking threat on set pieces, using his size and strength to provide a dangerous target in the box.

ALAN GORDON 21

The Galaxy's longest tenured player after having originally joined the club in 2004, Alan Gordon begins his sixth season in LA. Gordon had his best season in 2008 when he finished third on the club with five goals and seven assists in 26 games, all of which were career-highs. A big and strong forward, he is one of the Galaxy's best attackers, a fact that he proved by scoring late in the 2-2 draw with Chivas USA last year, earning the Galaxy the Honda SuperClasico title for the third time in four years.

BRYAN JORDAN 27

A young and exciting forward who is also capable of playing on the wing, Bryan Jordan begins his second season with the Galaxy. He appeared in eight games with the Galaxy after joining the club from the Portland Timbers prior to the start of the season. In the first start of his MLS career, Jordan tallied a goal and an assist to lead LA to a 2-2 home draw with Real Salt Lake. Despite standing just 5-foot-8, Jordan has an impressive vertical leap, making him strong in the air. He is also one of the quickest players on the Galaxy roster and is able to use his pace to get behind the opposition defense.

LA Galaxy Youth Academy

The LA Galaxy Youth Academy is the official youth development program of the LA Galaxy. Officially launched in April 2007 with the goal of identifying and training the best young talent in the region, the Youth Academy features U-16, U-18 and U-20 teams under the tutelage of Galaxy assistant coach Trevor James, who oversees all aspects of the Academy program as the club's Director of Player Development.

In 2008, the Galaxy Youth Academy U-16 and U-18 teams began play in the U.S. Soccer Development Academy, which features the top youth clubs from across the United States, while the U-20 team debuted in the USL Super 20 League.

Additionally, every summer the Academy sends a U-17 team to the annual SUM U-17 Cup, which pits the best MLS Youth Academy teams against one another in a tournament that is held at Dick's Sporting Goods Park, the home of the Colorado Rapids. In 2007, the inaugural year of the tournament, the Galaxy reached the semifinals while they were narrowly knocked out in the group stage of last year's competition.

The LA Galaxy Youth Academy will give talented young players with professional aspirations an excellent opportunity to pursue their dreams, stay close to home, and continue their education, without jeopardizing their college eligibility. Players registered for at least 12 months in the Galaxy's youth program become eligible to sign a professional contract with the Galaxy without entering the MLS SuperDraft. Between now and 2010, teams will be permitted to sign up to two players from its Home Grown Player List per year.

The LA Galaxy Youth Academy program will meet a number of League standards, including:

- The program will be based in the team's "Home Territory" approved by the MLS Board of Governors.
- Each team will be allowed one team of up to 18 players in each of the following age groups on its Home Grown Player List: Under-25, U-20, U-18, U-16, U-15, and U-14
- Clubs will hire at least one coach for each age group.
- Players on these teams will be registered on the team's Home-Grown Player List.
- A minimum number of training and game days per year has been set for each age group.

In December, the Galaxy made MLS history when they signed Tristan Bowen to a Generation adidas contract, making him the first player in league history to be signed by a club directly from their youth academy. The 18-year-old, who is a member of the United States Under-20 National Team, was a member of the Galaxy Academy U-20 team while also twice representing the club at the SUM U-17 Cup at Dick's Sporting Goods Park. He made a series of Reserve Division appearances at the end of the 2008 season before making his first team debut as a second half substitute in the friendly against the Oceania All-Stars in Auckland in December.

In addition to Bowen, a number of current Galaxy Youth Academy players have been called in to the U.S. National Team program, including Dersu Abolfathi, Alejandro Covarrubias, Eric Gonzalez and Riley Wolfe. ♦
